

Uhl Collectors Society

December 2005, January & February 2006

THOUGHTS FROM THE PRESIDENT

Greetings to our Uhl friends,

Hopefully none of you were directly affected by the devastating tornados, but all were touched in some manner. Our thoughts and prayers are with all who were involved in any way.

The Board of Directors met and discussed some exciting ideas for the 2006 Convention recently. The January meeting should finalize many ideas, but your input is also valued. Please contact any board member with ideas and suggestions. The mailing for the membership is going to be mailed earlier than previously stated so PLEASE look for it in the mail and respond without delay. A second mailing is costly to the Society and cuts back on our "fun money" to spend on the Convention. If you have any questions about membership, commemorative or meals, PLEASE call or e-mail for clarification before mailing it to the Secretary-Treasurer.

We still have 2005 Teapot pins. The cost is $5.00 with $1.00 shipping for up to six pins in one package. The Secretary or President can supply these.

Do not forget the Evansville Museum display scheduled for February. We need a lot of Uhl Pottery to make a nice display and hopefully create interest in our Society. Les Bain is chairman of this project so lets all help him in any way possible.

HOW WE BEGAN COLLECTING UHL POTTERY

Our collection of Uhl started long before we realized what we had. I received mixing bowls from my grandmother and vegetable bowls from my mother. Jim got a salt from his mother and a grape pitcher from his aunt, Helen Blemker.

One day Donna Blessinger was at our home and noticed a medium-sized turtle sitting on a shelf and made a comment that it was very collectible. I said, "Really!" It had been in my children's toy box for years.

We began checking around and decided to join the Collector's Society about two years after it began and have gone every year since.

We have all the commemoratives with the exception of the pencil.

Our best find was an Uhl ashtray marked Shell and Patoka Oil Company for one dollar at a yard sale. All of this has turned into a great hobby for both of us, which we enjoy.

Jim and Millie Blemker

Uhl Pottery Identification and Value Guide 2ND EDITION

We recently signed a contract with Collector Books for a new edition of our book on Uhl Pottery. We've been hard-at-work taking new pictures to add to this updated and expanded edition. With luck we hope to have the book published in time for the 2006 Convention.

UHL TRIVIA QUIZ

1. Are Uhl frog and turtle mouths open or shut?
2. Do you know to what temperature pieces reached when fired?
3. How can a piece of Uhl be identified other than being stamped or marked?
4. What year was the first kiln of Uhl fired in Huntingburg?
5. How many sizes of the Polar Bear water cooler were made?

Answers found on page 6. Thanks to Anna Mary Feldmeyer for these questions and answers.

The Uhl display at the Evansville Museum will take place February 5-May 14, 2006. If you would be willing to display some of your items please contact Les Bain at 1-812-435-8385 Ex. 227.

PEDDLING UHL POTTERY

In the previous edition, we were asking for any input or information on the practice of peddling Uhl pottery throughout the countryside. We were pleased to receive the following.

From Tom Uebelhor:

I had the pleasure of talking with Bernie McNallin, of Jasper about his uncle, Joe "Topsy" the "Rag Man" Vonderheide and would like to share it with the club members. Joe peddled Uhl pottery in Dubois and surrounding counties including Daviess, Pike and Knox to name a few.

Amish country was one of his favorite areas to sell. Joe was born in 1898 and started selling Uhl and other wares out of a Model A Ford Coupe fitted with a wooden bed at the age of 40. A typical day would start out by putting straw in the bed of his Model A, loading it with Uhl bowls, small jugs, crocks, pitchers, bean pots, vases and miniatures and start his trip to the Sinclair service station in Jasper, he would put in .50 to .75 cents of gas in the tank and be on his way toward Vincennes, Indiana. He would stop along the way at houses to sell Uhl, at service stations to sell rags for mechanics to use and in season to pick up watermelons and cantalope at Vincennes to sell on his way home.

The rags he would buy at people's homes would have to be sorted at his house, keeping the good ones for the service stations and the others he would sell to a scrap yard in Vincennes for the same price he paid for the rags just to get rid of them.

If a customer wanted a large Uhl item he would take the order and deliver it next time he was thru the area. He did not like to load big items to sell on the truck because it took up too much space.

Joe would go to the Pottery once or twice a week, pick up items he was low on, and pick up any special request items. His first choice was to hand pick the seconds they had at the pottery, (that explains why almost all the Uhl my parents had in the attic either had glaze runs or minor chip, etc.)

If the piece had cracks or more than a minor chip he would then buy a good item to fill the order. He kept a lot of Uhl on hand at his home in a large room in the back of the house. Bernie said he remembers it stacked quite high in the room with little room to walk around it.

After the Pottery closed, Bernie remembers driving him to Louisville Pottery in Louisville, Kentucky to buy pottery because Joe did not want to drive in the fast-paced city and also Bernie had a newer truck to make the trip.

Joe also made trips to Clay City Pottery in Clay City, Indiana to buy pottery after the Uhl Pottery closed. Bernie said Joe slowed down selling his wares after Uhl closed, but did sell more in the local area. People who knew he sold Uhl would stop at the house and buy items. When he quit selling on the road he asked Bernie to make a sign "Pottery for Sale" to put up in his front yard along the road and he did, but the sign was never put up. Joe passed away in 1990 at the age of 72.

From Amy Busler:

The Dilger family in Mariah Hill, Indiana can remember an older gentleman driving around the countryside in an old Model T with Uhl Pottery on straw in the bed of the truck. Every once in a while his mother would get a piece of pottery. He can remember one time, his mother traded eggs for a bowl. The salesman would then go to town and sell the eggs.

From the Press Secretary's Desk...

We regret that we did not get to attend either the Allen-Lemond or the Rohleder auctions due to a prior commitment and some health issues. We have heard comments from some of you that did get to attend these auctions. Pictured below is a five-gallon Evansville jug that was offered at the Allen-Lemond sale. Note the corncob stopper.

Please be giving some thought to what you can contribute to the next newsletter. We thank all those who contributed to this edition. We have especially enjoyed the stories about the Uhl peddlers. Do any of you have anything to add to the story?

The next edition will be March-April-May 2006.
